Compunetix Identified as Market Leader in 2010 Collaboration Report

CONTEX Summit™ platform powers Collaboration Service Providers

Monroeville, Pa., September 15, 2010 – Compunetix, Inc., the renowned manufacturer of voice, video, and web collaboration solutions has again claimed the world's top Collaboration Service Provider (CSP) market share of audio conferencing bridges. The statistics were compiled by Growth Partnership Company Frost & Sullivan in their "World Audio Conferencing Bridge Markets" report. Compunetix is consistently recognized among the top companies in the industry and has been reporting positive sales for the past decade. Most recently, the company was recognized as one of the Pittsburgh Business Times' Top 100 and was also named as one of the Pittsburgh Technology Council's Tech 50.

"Compunetix saw some huge successes during the year in the service provider market for its highly scalable and robust CONTEX range of audio conferencing bridges," notes Frost & Sullivan's Unified Communications & Collaboration Program Manager, Ms. Elka Popova. "An impressive growth in port shipments in this segment moved Compunetix to the top spot in our rankings."

"Over the years Compunetix has remained focused on technology innovation and R&D to develop and deliver reliable, scalable, and feature rich media platforms capable of supporting both IP and TDM environments," states Mr. Gerard Pompa, Compunetix Senior Vice President and Division Manager of the Communications Systems Division. "We are proud to be the top ranked by Frost & Sullivan and remain dedicated to growing with our partners in the collaboration service provider market."
